TWEETS IN THE STONEWALL COMPLAINT

Below are the tweets that Stonewall complained to my chambers (Garden Court) about, which are detailed in their email of 31st October 2019, to the Heads of Chambers, and copied to my clerks — the people responsible for booking work in my diary. (PH Bundle 331-2)

1. Retweeting threats of violence: "I am a walking hate crime"

2. Liking and writing posts calling trans women men:

Imagine watching what's going on as an alien. Women still at huge risk of male violence. But because some men like performing femininity we are eliminating every safe space women have. We're being told women's fears are irrational. AS IF ANY ASPECT OF MATERIAL REALITY HAS CHANGED

3. Writing tweets calling for trans people to lose their current legal rights:

Dawn Butler MP 🍌🇧🇷🇨🇪 @DawnButlerBrent · Oct 17, 2019

Here's my question to @trussliz What planet is she on!? It's not a political football. Transgender people have suffered enough a shocking 37% increase in hate crime. It's time the Tory Government stopped kicking the can down the road - reform the Gender Recognition Act NOW! 1/2

Women's rights are not a political football. Women & girls have suffered, and continue to suffer, at the hands of predatory & abusive men. It is offensive & unacceptable to suggest, much less legislate, for a system whereby any man can declare himself lawfully to be a woman.

Great news. Now tell the MoJ to stop sending men to women's prisons. Tell the NHS that no, men cannot self-ID onto women's wards. @trussliz tell the country that self-ID is not the law of the land. Pls start to undo the damage that has been done to women's rights by self-ID.

4. Writing posts that misgender trans women by saying they have "male privilege"

Allison Bailey

@BluskyeAllison

Transgenderism is real, self-ID is not. It makes a mockery of the trans movement, of women, our rights & safety.

The trans-women I know check their male privilege, they do not revel in it. We need boundaries & safeguards. Anyone arguing otherwise is not to be trusted.

5 Calling trans people and their campaign for equality "trans extremism" which is highly inflammatory language that encourages violent resistance.

Helen Saxby @helensaxby11 · Sep 24, 2019

I've just got home from the @Womans_Place_UK meeting in Brighton. Attendees had to run the gauntlet of aggressive protesters to get into the venue. One young woman was in tears at the level of intimidation #WPUKLab19

This is shocking. Every safeguard, legal & political, ensuring the rights and safety of women seems to be collapsing in the face of trans extremism.

@Sussex_police @HackneyAbbott @patel4witham your inaction & silence is shameful. You are giving the green light to lawlessness.

6. As well as specifically targeting Stonewall and specific members of our staff:
- Targeting a woman who works for us (our trans empowerment manager) and calling her a man "Morgan Page, a male"

Closer to home, more recent & from someone who should frankly know better. @PriyamvadaGopal describes herself as a lecturer.

And to those women of colour who want to 'debate' the existence of transpeople. Please remember it wasn't so long ago that your own right to be considered 'female' was not to be taken for granted (you're still not the default) & your own rights are still up for 'debate' by some.

What's this now? As a black woman I am not allowed to fight against trans identified men - often white men - attacking women's rights? I should know my place? Second class woman that I am? You are a disgrace.

Stonewall recently hired Morgan Page, a male bodied person who ran workshops with the sole aim of coaching heterosexual men who identify as lesbians on how they can coerce young lesbians into having sex with them. Page called "overcoming the cotton ceiling" and it is popular.

 Complaint upheld by Garden Court Chambers

7. Calling our work on LGBT equality "gender extremism"

8. Accusing Stonewall of "appalling levels of intimidation, fear & coercion"
